

A president against unions

The United States elected an anti-union politician to become president. What should union activists do?

- Read Daniel Hunter's article "10 ways to be prepared and grounded now that Trump has won" at <https://wagingnonviolence.org>.
- Pace yourself. You can't do everything that needs doing. Select carefully.
- Prefer offense to defense. Don't emphasize protecting what little we have. Emphasize organizing to win big advances.
- Use organizing for big advances to build a wide, deep base. Evaluate actions by asking "How does this action build a stronger base for us (more people engaged, broader demographics engaged, stronger relationships and skills among our people, etc.)?"
- Start with the people closest to you (family, friends, co-workers, local members, neighbors, co-worshippers).
- Support rural organizing such as Down Home North Carolina <https://downhomenc.org> and Siembra <https://www.siembranc.org>.
- The next president's plans to deport workers, impose tariffs, and dismantle parts of the government could make the COVID-19 supply chain economic disruption look minor. Organizations and households should stock up on storable consumables.
- Until we build a better society, people (likely including you and people you love) will suffer. People (possibly including people you love) will die. Grieve, mourn, cry, organize. Pace yourself. Organize the world we deserve.

A president against unions

The United States elected an anti-union politician to become president. What should union activists do?

- Read Daniel Hunter's article "10 ways to be prepared and grounded now that Trump has won" at <https://wagingnonviolence.org>.
- Pace yourself. You can't do everything that needs doing. Select carefully.
- Prefer offense to defense. Don't emphasize protecting what little we have. Emphasize organizing to win big advances.
- Use organizing for big advances to build a wide, deep base. Evaluate actions by asking "How does this action build a stronger base for us (more people engaged, broader demographics engaged, stronger relationships and skills among our people, etc.)?"
- Start with the people closest to you (family, friends, co-workers, local members, neighbors, co-worshippers).
- Support rural organizing such as Down Home North Carolina <https://downhomenc.org> and Siembra <https://www.siembranc.org>.
- The next president's plans to deport workers, impose tariffs, and dismantle parts of the government could make the COVID-19 supply chain economic disruption look minor. Organizations and households should stock up on storable consumables.
- Until we build a better society, people (likely including you and people you love) will suffer. People (possibly including people you love) will die. Grieve, mourn, cry, organize. Pace yourself. Organize the world we deserve.

